

Proposals That Did Not Pass

Proposals that were voted on but did not pass

- 12/8/204: Who is a Spoke?
- 12/04/2025: How to make a proposal
- 12/2/2025: Who is a Spoke
- Spokes proposal - meeting schedule

12/8/204: Who is a Spoke?

Who is a Spoke?, Frankie, created: 12/8/24

- A Spoke is:
 - a group of >5 people AND
 - the group has access to Woodbine's physical space (i.e. can unlock the door) or Woodbine's resources (e.g. website, Instagram, lease, funds)
- What if your group is <5 people?
 - Identify a larger working group that you can caucus with. Perhaps the group that grants you access to the Woodbine space/resources
 - Still come to the Spokes council meeting to observe and recruit members
- What if our group doesn't have the door code or its own access to Woodbine resources?
 - Your spoke is the one that grants you access to the space.
 - For example, if Gym people unlock the space for you, you caucus with Gym
- The proposal contains no opinion on how Spokes decide on a Spokesperson

comments (format: commenter name: comment)

- Ash: I like this idea of caucusing if your group is <5 people. We can talk to co-workers about this and if they want, they could caucus with yoga or another analogous wg with similar needs.
- Ash: we may need to have some suggestions on how to consider which group you will be part of during a fishbowl spokescouncil. you may be a spoke of one and the observer of another group. can you be a spoke for multiple groups at one meeting? my gut is no. this could be a structure we offer and could be good to push and allow more ppl to be spokes.
- Briar: this seems like a really elegant solution. by having straight-forward criteria about "who is a spoke," we don't need to have a process for adding new spokes. something to consider, though: who decides who has the keycode? could that person or group of people exercise undue influence over the composition of the spokescouncil?

12/04/2025: How to make a proposal

“How to make a proposal”, Violet, 12/4/25

Found some good language on how to make a proposal. Am proposing this as an answer to how to make a proposal, which can come from anyone:

Present Proposal or Issue

When possible and appropriate, proposals ought to be prepared in writing and distributed well in advance of the meeting in which a decision is required. This encourages prior discussion and consideration, helps the presenter anticipate concerns, minimizes surprises, and involves everyone in creating the proposal. (If the necessary groundwork has not been done, the wisest choice might be to send the proposal to committee. Proposal writing is difficult to accomplish in a large group. The committee would develop the proposal for consideration at a later time.) The presenter reads the written proposal aloud, provides background information, and states clearly its benefits and reasons for adoption, including addressing any existing concerns. (basically the food co-op method LP shared

Currently I'm thinking the express purpose/method of the spokescouncil should be to create cohesion between all of the working groups within the space and to be a means of facilitating decision-making being made by the “at-large membership” of Woodbine.

I found this to be a compelling argument against consensus, addresses a lot of concerns people have of small influences blocking functioning of the council.

<https://theanarchistlibrary.org/library/andrew-flood-a-practical-guide-to-anarchist-organisation#toc61>

Two quotes from above in the text that support this argument “In working out a libertarian concept of organization, we need to remember that the individual members not only have rights that must be respected by the organization, they also have obligations to the rest of the membership. Since the majority have the right to control their own organization, individuals must conduct themselves so as to respect this right of the majority.”

“The idea is that the main decision-making responsibility of the organization is not to be delegated to some “steering committee” or executive but is conducted directly by the membership through their own discussions and votes; this is the heart of the libertarian concept of organization.”

I think a sort of synthesis of consensus and voting could work well. Consensus works well for small groups with a cohesive purpose; the working groups of woodbine have many purposes but possibility of common ideals. if we take the elements of proposal making and reworking from the consensus process, i.e. giving everyone an opportunity to have input but removing blocking power and even the potential for a small united minority to sabotage decision-making. after an established time period the spokescouncil will take proposal with suggestions and rework into a new coherent proposal to be voted on by everyone. votes can be tallied in a transparent manner through thumbs up/thumbs down reacts in group chats and then added to a google sheet accessible by all but only editable by spokescouncil. in the case of urgent issues the spokescouncil should be empowered to decide within group chat or emergency meeting with availability for feedback from wider membership later.

So for example:

Non-urgent: there is a proposal that any group that eats food during their meeting must clean the area when their meeting is finished. if you sit on couches then vacuum couches and rug. if you sit at tables then wipe down tables and sweep underneath them. make sure all food waste and other waste go into proper receptacles. if it is a trash night please help take out trash. > two weeks have gone by and suggestions are made > spokescouncil disseminates to their working groups > groups vote > votes are tallied and proposal is implemented if passed or retooled and re-presented if failed

Urgent: refrigerator stops working and an obvious fix can't be determined by folks on site> spokescouncil votes to call electrician > after the fact there is feedback that skilled individuals in working groups could have fixed instead > proposal is made to form a repairs working group that can be tapped in case of future technical issues to save money people would have to declare what group they vote in or something like that to not have redundant/extra votes. it might be more efficient to put decision making power more firmly in the hands of the council with the possibility for feedback from wb at large. proposal posting ahead of spokes meetings would ensure transparency and allow time for feedback. it depends on how much we want to empower individuals and how much we think the people who show up to woodbine want to run it. concentric circle structure can mitigate some of that, for example the strength collective votes on space proposals rather than the whole strength community, but that isn't moving toward the broadest sense of autonomy and community involvement imo

comments (format: commenter name: comment)

- Ash: I agree with non-consensus model. From the linked text “The structural requirement of unanimity puts pressure on the majority to placate small minorities in order to accomplish something. Often this leads to decisions that paper over disagreements and leave everyone dissatisfied.” This is super important to remember imo. Even in smaller group interactions in the space, we are ideally striking a balance b/w supporting minority voices that are valid (especially when we are attempting to correct structural bias like racism and misogyny) but also to make sure we are not being hamstrung by a small group or even one person's voice overriding the group moving forward. anarchists are often way too nice (because we want to see everyone as acting in good faith and want to be sensitive to our own biases)! sometimes people are assholes and bad faith actors and no one has a right to take over a discussion and it's ok for people to call that out. Something to consider as a group is we can ask ourselves if

1. if the minority voice is bringing up something the rest didn't consider but most people see as needing to be addressed
2. the minority voice is representing bad faith intentions to stall or distract people from moving forward
3. it's a good faith disagreement that most of the group doesn't concur with.

The response to

1. is to reconsider the issue and draft a new proposal.
 2. there should be some way to publicly call this bad faith or distraction out and move forward. if
 3. acknowledge and reiterate the shared value of non-consensus and why we have that value and move forward with respect for that person's dissent. Conflict support skills might become very important in the case of 2. and 3. and we should be ready to offer that pro-actively.
- Ash: I am a little confused about how the mixture of consensus and voting ideas would happen in reality and how the signal chat would be involved. This feels like we need to dig into this irl in the meeting and talk through how this would work and weigh it against other methods including the "Proposal is passed if consensus minus 2". is this the very basic method we use to pass a proposal to start? I wonder if we can develop more complex systems as we go along and face the problems this will bring up v. overwhelming ppl with a complex process

12/2/2025: Who is a Spoke

“Who is a Spoke”, Briar, 12/2/25

This is based on what I heard people saying during our last meeting. If you have amendments you'd like to make, please feel free to do so in the chat prior to the meeting.

I propose that all current working groups at Woodbine become spokes. If new working groups are formed, they can become spokes with the approval of the spokes council. The current working groups include: operations, location, programming, finance, gym, mycology, basement, pantry, research group, yoga, film screening, meditation, dinner, gardening, fundraising, writers workshop, food fight, Tuesday night reading group, and screen printing.

We may want to add something about how each spoke representative must be voted into that position by their respective group

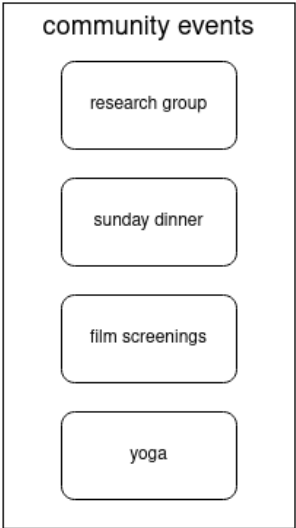

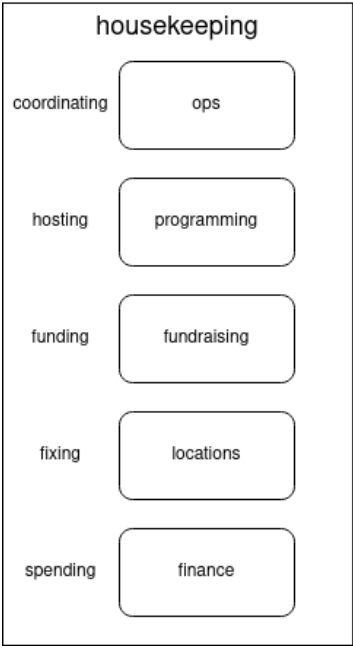

We may also want to consider the amount of influence that any given individual could exercise with the proposed spokes. We need consensus minus 2 to pass proposals. Is there any concern that with the listed working groups, a highly involved individual might be able to influence 3 or more spokes

comments (format: commenter name: comment)

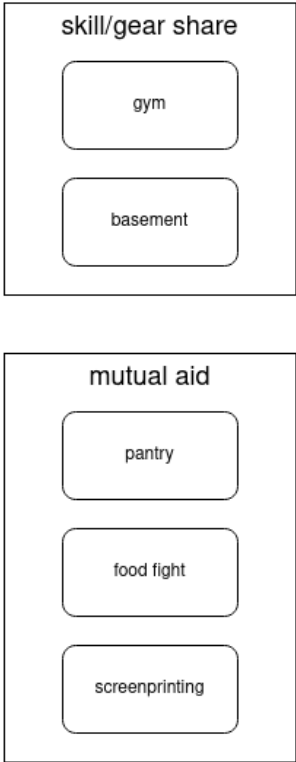

- Ash: i suggest coworking isn't a working group in the spokescouncil until there are more co-workers
- Violet: each spokesperson could be asked to commit to 3-6 months of representing their wg in the spokescouncil
- Ash: about choosing who is a “spoke” - We state that we value autonomous operation and each working group is functionally very different. Autonomy imo will help ppl feel more excited and accountable if we can also offer clear suggestions to try so ppl aren't overwhelmed with the ask. For example a working group doesn't necessarily need to do elections to choose a spokesperson if ppl step up and rotate willingly based on everyone sharing a sense of what is needed
- Ella: Agreed re: autonomy. For a suggested model, one super simple way for groups to choose spokes might be for someone to send out a text “Emoji react if you'd volunteer to be a spokes this term” and then I bet we could find some tool where one of those people who reacted to the text is randomly selected (if needed). Seems elections could become kind of toxic popularity contests, promote competition within groups etc imo
- Violet: super simple tool out there on the interwebs (just searched randomized selector)
<https://pickerwheel.com/>
- paul: here's a little map I made grouping the WGs by how I intuit they relate to the space

•

uses communal space
high public visibility
small organizing core largecasual membership

dedicated physical space
low public visibility
elusively open membership

low public visibility
small core & membershi

Spokes proposal - meeting schedule

Spokes proposal - meeting schedule - LP

Motivation

- I find the survey -> meet -> survey loop to be cumbersome and noisy.
- I think regularity can be good for keeping a tempo
- As we don't have a shifting role identified as convener, it vests responsibility in individuals vs the body.

Proposal: Change spokes meeting schedule to one of the following processes, or don't, and stay with what we have.

Details

Plenum vs klatch

Plenum: An assembly or meeting with all members present.
Could just call a general meeting, all-hands meeting, full meeting.

Klatch: An informal group that gathers more or less frequently, especially for conversation.
Could just call a get together, meetup...

Groups this affects

Everyone

Work required

General survey, or compiling data from previous surveys
Noting selected day/times in a doc somewhere

Money required

None

Proposals

A, B, C, or none.

A) 1-2-GM bounce

Identify two broadly available time/days in a general survey.
Alternate meetings between those day/times.
Do full surveys for GMs.

A) 1-2-3-GM bounce

Identify three broadly available time/days in a general survey.

Alternate meetings between those day/times.

Do full surveys for GMs.

B) Alternate GMs between survey day/times on a set timing

<https://basement.woodbine.nyc/spokes-proposal-template#>